

John Moses is the director of the Collection Strategies Division at the U. S. Environmental Protection Agency. He has 22 years of experience in the private and public sector, analyzing environmental programs, devising policies, and developing and operating innovative information technology solutions and business processes. Mr. Moses' division oversees EPA's Freedom of Information Act program, Records Management program, Privacy Act program, and Paperwork Reduction Act program. His division operates several multi-million dollar fee-for-service information technology solutions, including EPA's docket center, EPA's electronic records repository, the federal-wide eRulemaking Program, and EPA's new eDiscovery service. He also led a cross-agency team that produced EPA's highly-regarded Open Government Plan. Prior to his current position, Mr. Moses served as the Director of the eRulemaking Program, a federal-wide E-Government and Open Government program that encourages public interaction with the federal regulatory process at www.regulations.gov. Mr. Moses has received two EPA Gold Medals and the 2008 Federal 100 Award, and the 2008 CIO Council Leadership Award. Before joining EPA, Mr. Moses conducted research on innovative environmental programs at the Aspen Institute and worked as a management consultant in the private sector. Mr. Moses received both his Master's and Bachelor's degrees from Cornell University.